His hits were farring, but not stunning in offec Charlie White can't compare with Charlie White can't compare with Benny Leonard in speed and cleverness, and he might not land one punch on Weish where Leonard landed ten. But his one blow would be likely to carry the sleeping potion. White is the hardest hitting lightweight in the country. He has a remarkable knockout record. That's the difference, and it's a difference that will make Freddy fight with extreme caution even though he is to be protected by his own private referee.

P OR a week or so there have been rumors of a match between featherweight champion Johnny Kilbane and George Chancy of Baltimore. Chancy has been challenging Kilbane for several months and his e press agent has been filling the mail to various newspaper offices with statements explaining Chaney's ex-treme willingness to fight Kilbane for money, marbles or amusement, and Kilbane's cowardly flight from the Chaney challenge.

Chancy is a really good feather-weight, known for his ability to eath shifty opponents and knock them out. Kilbane, having clung to the title for several years partly by virtue of baving dodged decision matches and weight now), hasn't shown any desire to mingle with Chaney or any other particularly tough feather.

A day or so ago a Baltimore club tried to match Chaney and Kilbane. Johnny's manager demanded $10,000 for his and, win, lose or draw.

And, as if this wasn't frenzied finance enough for one evening, Chaney's manager demanded $6,000.

From the above we deduce a certain conclusion. We find outselves justified in believing that both Chaney and Kilbane are satisfied to stall along on the advertising they've already gained through talking about a match, and content themselves with already gained through talking about a match, and content themselves with picking up the "soft ones." Neither of them wants a genuine championship fight, and hereafter the outpourings of their respective boost-ers can go into our waste paper basket.

From a racing standpoint no season here ever started more auspiciously. The Saratoga track stable room and that of horse haven have been taken up long ago and late comers among the owners and trainers have been forced to seek quarters outside the course. There are more than 1,500 horses on hand, all champing on the bit and ready to race.

The big feature of the season in a racing way here is going to be furnished by the two-year-olds. It seems ages since there were so many prospective stake winners on hand. This is partly due to the curtailment of racing in Europe because of the war and the consequent shipping of the cream of the produce of foreign breeding establishments to these shores. There are more than 500 foreign bred horses on hand, housed in the stables of the millionaire owners who will vie with one and another here for the honor and glory of turf victories. John Sanford has any number of good ones. So has Harry Payne Whitney, and the new racing recruit Macomber, whose string is trained by that veteran horseman, Walter Jennings. C. K. G. Billings and the Johnson interests too, are well represented in the juvenile division, all of which on interests, too, are well represented in the juvenile division, all of which means the most spirited kind of racing from now till the end of the
